

One stuck client email reply

Input: one stuck client email, last message, or rough draft. Output: subject plus one reply draft.

Stuck client email context

sent quote two weeks ago
they said it looked reasonable needed to check budget no reply since
want to follow up without sounding pushy

Next reply to send

Subject: quick check on the quote
Hi Jordan - quick check on the quote from two weeks ago.
Should I keep this open for this month, or close it out for now? If it still makes sense, I can hold the Thursday start slot.

Why this is useful

ROUGH INPUT	CLEANER EMAIL DOES
"sent quote two weeks ago"	Names the real thread.
"needed to check budget"	Acknowledges the buyer's actual blocker.
"no answer since then"	Turns silence into a clean yes/no ask.
no clear ask	Asks for yes, no, or a next step.

Optional internal note

FIELD	VALUE
Outcome	One email ready to send.
Next action	Paste it into the existing thread.
Risk	Do not send private details in the example.

Alan turns one stuck client email into one reply draft. This example uses invented data.