

One stalled-lead follow-up

Input: one stalled lead, last reply, or rough draft. Output: subject line and follow-up email meant to get a yes, no, or next step.

Stalled lead notes

riverstone dental
asked for pricing last week
no reply after quote
do not want to sound pushy
need yes / no / next step maybe close the loop if not active

Follow-up to send

Subject: still worth revisiting this?
Thanks again for taking a look last week. Should I keep this open for next week, or is it better for me to close the loop for now?
If it is still worth discussing, I can send the two simplest next-step options.
If not, no problem. I will close it out on my side.

Why this is useful

STALLED INPUT	FOLLOW-UP DOES
"no reply after quote"	Asks for a clear yes, no, or next step.
"do not want to sound pushy"	Keeps the tone calm and low pressure.
"maybe close the loop"	Gives permission to end the thread cleanly.
"need yes / no / next step"	Makes the outcome measurable.

Optional internal note

FIELD	VALUE
Outcome	Follow-up email ready to send.
Next action	Get a yes, no, or next step from the stalled lead.
Risk	Do not keep guessing while the lead stays quiet.

RelayBrief turns one stalled lead or rough follow-up into one email to send. This example uses invented data.
