

One stuck-lead follow-up

Input: one stuck lead, last reply, or rough draft. Output: one plain follow-up email to send.

Stuck lead notes

asked for pricing for a small campaign
no reply after quote
do not want to sound pushy need yes / no / next step maybe close the loop if not active

Follow-up to send

Subject: should I close this out?
Quick check. Should I keep this open for next week, or close it out for now?
If the quote was too early, no problem. I can leave it alone and follow up later.
If it is still worth discussing, I can send the simplest next step.

Why this is useful

STUCK INPUT	FOLLOW-UP DOES
"no reply after quote"	Asks for a clear yes, no, or next step.
"do not want to sound pushy"	Keeps the tone calm and low pressure.
"maybe close the loop"	Gives permission to end the thread cleanly.
"need yes / no / next step"	Makes the outcome measurable.

Optional internal note

FIELD	VALUE
Outcome	One email ready to send.
Next action	Get a yes, no, or next step from the stuck lead.
Risk	Do not keep guessing while the lead stays quiet.

Alan turns one stuck lead or rough follow-up into one email to send. This example uses invented data.
